What is osteoarthritis?

Osteoarthritis (OA) is a progressive degenerative joint disease characterized not only by cartilage degradation, but by inflammation of the soft tissue around the joint, called the synovial membrane. Accompanying the OA, a reduction in naturally occurring hyaluronic acid (HA) within the synovial joint fluid dramatically decreases the mechanical properties of the synovial fluid, ultimately resulting in joint pain and stiffness¹.

Major symptoms of OA:

- joint pain and swelling
- restricted movement
- grating feeling in the joint

It is the primary cause of disability in active people and older adults, resulting in pain, loss of function, and reduced quality of life².

OA AFFECTED JOINT

The highest amount of HA in a single injection - 120mg

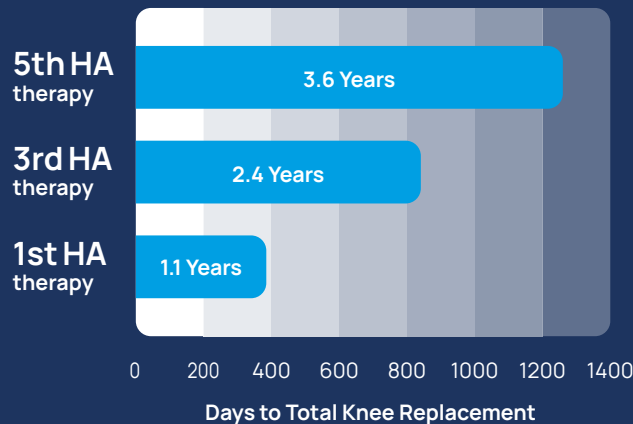

Biolevox™ HA ONE is a viscosupplement designed to replenish the naturally occurring HA found in synovial joints. It contains 120mg of highly purified HA in a 4.8 mL volume, which is the highest amount of HA in a single injection.

The HA contained in Biolevox™ HA ONE has been specifically developed for single injection therapy, to relieve the symptoms of OA.

Completely safe treatment profile

The HA contained in Biolevox™ HA ONE comes from strictly controlled bacterial fermentation; it does not contain animal derivatives of any kind, meaning it is extremely pure, with minimal risk of allergic reaction.

Stay active with HA supplementation

Biolevox™ HA ONE - a single intra-articular injection therapy for relieving the symptoms of osteoarthritis.

Supplementation of the OA joint with HA restores the proper mechanical properties of synovial fluid, providing joint protection against disease progression.

Hyaluronic acid is a naturally occurring component within the body. HA is a significant element of synovial fluid, enabling smooth joint movement and providing shock absorption during physical activities⁵.
